The National Service Scheme (NSS) volunteers actively participated in the Polio Drive, contributing their efforts to the nationwide initiative to eradicate polio. The Pulse Polio Drive in Adhale Khurd village saw active participation from NSS students of the International Institute of Information Technology, who worked hand in hand with the local health center. Their dedicated efforts ensured that children under 5 years old in the village received vital polio vaccinations, marking a significant stride towards the community's health and well-being.

The NSS volunteers' contribution to the Polio Drive demonstrated their commitment to public health and community well-being. The collective efforts played a vital role in advancing the goal of eradicating polio and ensuring a healthier future for children.
